Forbes Magazine lists Cincinnati as Ninth Safest City

Cincinnati, OH – Forbes magazine has ranked Cincinnati as the ninth safest city in the U.S. with the eighth lowest rate of violent crimes. To determine their list, Forbes looked at the country's 40 largest metropolitan statistical areas across four categories: violent crime rates from the FBI's 2008 uniform crime report; 2008 workplace death rates from the Bureau of Labor Statistics; 2008 traffic death rates from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration; and natural disaster risk along with rankings from green living site SustainLane.com.
